

Phonics

The good news is that there are clear rules about how Italian sounds are spelled. Of course, people have different accents, depending on where they come from or their background, but the basic patterns between sounds and their spellings are regular and quite easy to learn compared to some other languages.

Vowels

Each of the five vowels has its own sound:

a as in hat

e as in pet

i as in feet

o as in clock

u as in boot

male

carta

casa

amare

agosto

[to be]

essere

[this]

questo

[to have]

avere

letto

senza ketchup

senza

libro

interessante

lista

primo

in

dodici

[a lot]

molto

mondo

orso

con

[a; an]

uno

tu

[on]

su

musica

[to use]

usare

cantare

cavallo

cambiare

campo

calcio

con

piccolo

come?

bianco

costa

scuro

cucina

scuola

cuoco

cuore

veloce

voce

cellulare

dicembre

[necessary]

necessario

calcio

dieci

amici

cinema

cibo

chiesa

[to call]

chiamare

che?

[why, because]

perché

[clear, light]

chiaro

sciarpa

sciare

[choice]

scelta

scendere

[risk]

rischio

schiena

[joke]

scherzo

schermo

gallina

bottega

regalo

gamba

[to pay]

pagare

[long]

lungo

gomma

[place]

luogo

golf

lago

[figure,
shape]

figura

[to watch]

guardare

[to read]

leggere

gennaio

gelato

[generally]

generalmente

gesto

pagina

[today]

oggi

originale

ginnastica

viaggi

The i sound when followed by a / o / u almost completely disappears.

giallo

giocare

giusto

tartarughe

portoghese

ghiaccio

[colleagues]

colleghi

famiglia

luglio

foglia

biglietto

bottiglia

montagna

bagno

disegno

Spagna

giugno

Double consonants in Italian are pronounced much more forcefully than a single consonant. The easiest way to do this is to shorten the vowel sound which comes before them. Compare these words below.

sette

palla

sete

pala

nonno

pollo

sonno

nono

polo

sono

H in Italian is always silent.

hotel

[I have]

ho

chiuso

[why? / because]

perché